In the southeastern part of Africa is a little place called Repo Village.

Repo Village is found in the area called Malawi.

A young man there, name Chisomo, wanted to help the children of the village.

One day while chatting to a friend on the computer, he talked about the children of Repo village.

He knew many children who had no parent to care for them.

One young boy, taking care of his brothers, dreams of someday becoming a pilot.

Sowing the Seeds of LOVE Malawi

Chisomo's internet friend created a web site to help get donations for the project called "Sowing the seeds of love – Malawi".

Soon lots of seeds were donated for the people of Repo village to plant.

The first crop to harvest was cabbage. There was enough to feed the entire village.

Chisomo worried about the children who had no shoes. Their little feet were burning from the hot ground.

To Chisomo's surprise, a great grandmother in the United States sent him enough money to buy 35 pairs of slippers for the little children.

These children need help to survive. Your donation can help get some of the supplies they need to go to school.

Even a small donation can help provide a bowl of porridge for one child to eat.

Please gather your pennies and other change, then send it to “Sowing the seeds of love- Malawi project” to help put smiles on the children of Malawi’s faces. The address is in the front of this book.
